

Copyright Terms of Use (License V001)

1. Definitions

- a. “Licensor” shall mean NASASpaceflight LLC
- b. “Partner” shall mean Astra Space Inc.
- c. “TOU” shall refer to this Copyright Terms of Use (License V001).
- d. “Broadcast” shall refer to the livestreamed broadcast of the Astra launch attempt
- e. “License” shall have refer to the grant of rights contained in Section 2, along with all limitations or restrictions thereto appended.

2. License

Subject to the restrictions contained herein, Licensor hereby grants you a limited nonexclusive, revocable, nontransferable, worldwide right and license to post, share, display, create derivative works of and publicly perform the Broadcast solely for non-commercial purposes. Such purposes shall expressly include i) translating the Broadcast to languages other than English, ii) providing good-faith commentary, discussion, or analysis to the Broadcast, iii) using the Broadcast as supplemental video in a manner secondary to primary footage (i.e, “b-roll” footage). Rebroadcasting the Broadcast without modification is expressly prohibited by this license. The rights and licenses granted herein shall not include the right for you to re-cut, edit, or modify the Broadcast, except for non-substantive or temporal modifications necessary to create highlights or cut downs as outlined herein.

This license is subject to your good faith, prominent, and conspicuous attribution to both Licensor and Partner as the source of the Broadcast. Keeping on-screen credit to “NASASpaceflight/Astra” during the non-commercial use constitutes sufficient attribution under this policy.

You shall not receive any ownership rights whatsoever in the Broadcast under this License, and the Partner and Licensor shall retain title and ownership in and to the Broadcast. This license is freely revocable without notice by Licensor or Partner.

To inquire about receiving a commercial use license for any use not permitted by the foregoing, please email chrisbergin@nasaspaceflight.com.